

Some Local Politics.

The campaign is now upon us and the office seeker is abroad in the land. It does not seem that but few Republicans desire office or if they do they are making a still hunt. On the other hand, the Democrats, so far as their office seeking proclivities are concerned, are like some of the market quotations, "bath active and strong," in the matter of urging the honest voter in their support.

The Democratic candidates now in the field were pointed out to the SUN reporter by a Democrat who expects to support all the candidates in the field, both at the convention and at the polls, for the various offices. The candidates are as follows:

For the council W. H. Carroll, Max Salzman. Henry F. Ashurst will make the race for the assembly and will have no opposition in his party.

The Democrats know a good thing when they see it and a lot of good fellows are seeking the nomination for the sheriff's office. Chas. Canall is leading the race and S. S. Acker, F. W. Payne, Fred Holden, George Hochderfer and Fletcher Fairchild are running neck and neck after him.

T. E. Pulliam will be the only candidate for recorder.

Harry Harkness, a bright young man from Williams, and R. H. Jones, the editor of the "Gem," and one of the shining lights of the party, are after the nomination for probate judge.

George Hoxworth and Henry Banta each want the consent of their party to handle the cash of the county for the next two years providing the voters endorse them.

The district attorney's office is a pretty good sized plum and T. S. Bunch, P. B. Thornton and James Loy are candidates for this plum, with the chance in favor of Bunch.

Our informant could give us no information as to the candidates for supervisors, justice of the peace or constable, but supposed that the disappointed candidates would be given these offices.
